THE PURITANS.

Address delivered by EDMUND WETMORE of New York.

The Puritans have an abiding interest for a society such as yours, for they, to a peculiar degree, made the history which it is your object to study and perpetuate. Eastern Long Island was essentially an English and not a Dutch settlement. The earliest ties of its farmers and fishermen were across the Sound with Connecticut and Rhode Island rather than with the Dutch burghers of Manhattan and Brooklyn, and, if beneath the successive immigrations that have flowed in over the ancient boundaries, we seek for the traits of the earliest days, we find the marks of New England origin, softened and made attractive by that touch of the South that belongs to our Island, and which, like our gentle summer breezes, tempers the keen wind that blows from Massachusetts Bay.

A collection of all that has been written and published concerning the Puritans would, of itself, almost completely fill the shelves of your beautiful new city library. They have been eulogized and criticised. Plymouth Rock has been worshipped like the sacred stone at Mecca and derided as the Blarney Stone of New England. Their history has been minutely studied, their character and influence made the subject of innumerable treatises, and to attempt to deal even in the barest outline with any considerable part of so vast a theme within the limits of an evening's address, would be as presumptuous as impossible. I only propose to offer a few observations, as to what, as it seems to me, are the most striking influences of the Puritans upon our complex national character, and to that end to refer to some of the conditions affecting the development of Puritanism both before and after the emigration to New England.

It is difficult for us, born in an age of universal toleration, to appreciate the character of one in which religion was the absorbing interest in life and the church the burning question in politics. But conditions so different from those we have ever known will be better understood when we remember the closeness of the union between church and state which existed in Europe for so many centuries. When a certain form of religion is, by law, made the religion of the state, to reject the authority of the church is to reject the authority of the law. Enforced conformity, therefore, was by no means wholly due to religious zeal or bigotry, or even to the efforts of the church to extend its power. It was originally regarded as one of the things necessary for the preservation of the civil as well as the ecclesiastical government. The laws that sent heretics to the stake or dissenters to prison were looked upon by those in authority as we, at the present time, look upon laws against anarchists. Nor, for centuries, was the right of the state to uphold the authority of the state religion disputed. The Reformation, itself, was directed—not against the power to uphold an established church, but against the corruptions that had crept into the church of Rome. Only by degrees did the abuses in the state church lead to their logical result and show that the functions of the church and state are separate, and that freedom of conscience demands that no mere human law shall attempt to compel conformity to a religious creed.

The conflict which ended in the establishment of that truth, began with the Reformation and swept over Europe, and its course in England gave rise to the sect and party of the Puritans.

The Catholic reaction under the reign of Queen Mary sent scores of the Protestant clergy across to the Continent, and they gathered chiefly in the cities of Frankfort and Geneva. These were centres of Protestant activity, the Genevan churches, especially, falling under the all powerful influence of Calvin. The doctrine of the early reformers that the bible and not the decretals of the Church of Rome was the sole ultimate authority for religious belief led, as it inevitably must, to the formation of parties growing out of different and conflicting interpretations of the bible itself, and gave rise to much furious theological debate. Naturally partisan feeling ran high among the exiles, and it was among them and at that time, that those who insisted upon the strictest and most literal interpretation of the Scriptures, purists in their adherence to the Scriptural language and their rigid obedience to the Scriptural precepts, received the name "Puritans," a term which gradually acquired a wider significance until it came to designate the great party in England that overthrew the monarchy and laid the foundation of the civil liberty of which we are today the inheritors.

With the accession of Elizabeth, and during the early years of her reign, the English nation breathed more freely. The dark days of Bloody Mary were over. The duel to the death between the Protestant Queen and Philip the Second of Spain, rallied the people around her throne, and ended in triumph with the defeat and destruction of the Invincible Armada. Protestantism was safe within her dominions ; nor was she any zealot in religious matters herself, although she was driven by circumstances into a policy of repression against Puritanism.

Silently, during her reign, an influence of mighty and abiding force had been growing up among her subjects and that was the knowledge of the bible then first brought home to the common people. Accustomed as we are to the brilliant literature of the Elizabethan age, we are liable to forget by how small a proportion of the whole population of England it was read or heard of at the time it was produced. The citizens of London could flock to the theatre "when Jonson's learned sock was on" or Shakespeare "warbled his native wood notes wild;" the courtiers, the scholars of the universities, the more highly educated few, read or heard the poems and sonnets that were passed from hand to hand in manuscript or owned the volumes that treated of other themes than theology; but all these were but an inconsiderable part of the great body of the people—the people made up of the yeomanry, the handicraftmen, the home dwellers of the country and small villages of England. When to these, the bible, instead of a sealed or forbidden book, became known and free to all, at first chained to the desk in the churches, then widely circulated in the early forms founded on Tyndale's noble translation, it wrought a profound effect. It intensified and extended a lasting religious revival. To unlettered minds it appealed alike to the heart and the imagination. Its stories of heroism and pathos, of Providential interference, of Divine anger and Divine mercy, its magnificent imagery, the terrors of its denunciations and the unspeakable glories of its promises, heard for the first time and heard in their own language, opened to them a new world. It widened the horizon and glorified the paths of narrow and humble lives. It was to them a whole literature in a single volume. Its language became interwoven in their common speech, and in striving to follow it in all things the Puritan character was developed, both as to its virtues and its failings. To a people thus aroused and permeated with the idea of a revealed authority higher than that of any institution of man's making, there was sure to arise a conflict with the established church. Not that there was a wide difference at first between the Puritans and the Church of England. They opposed certain of its forms and ceremonials because they deemed them in their symbolic character too closely allied to the Romanism which they abhorred. Yet they clung to the mother church. Their ministers were still among its regularly installed clergy. They omitted or modified such parts of the service as they deemed matter of conscience and, for a time, were little molested. Elizabeth herself would, doubtless, have willingly let them alone. Her personal feeling in religious matters tended strongly towards indifference. She regarded the strife between Catholic and Protestant rather as it related to the salvation of her throne than the salvation of the souls of her subjects. She was willing that they should believe what they pleased as long as they did not create disorder or dispute her own supremacy. But this state of comparative peace and toleration was broken up by a college professor. Thomas Cartwright held one of the chairs of Divinity in the University of Cambridge. He was a Puritan, one who had studied and become imbued with the doctrines of Calvin, which he carried to extremes as great as ever the most absolute of the Popes had sought to reach for the Catholic Church. A peculiarity of the Puritans was their logical consistency. Grant their premises, in which they themselves had implicit faith, and their conclusions were irresistible, and if those conclusions led them into the jaws of death, into the jaws of death they went without flinching, and if, with equally conclusive logic, their reasoning consigned their adversaries to the devil, to the devil they sent them. It was out of their own party that the impulse was given that reawakened the conflict between themselves and the government. Cartwright argued that the whole spiritual authority should be vested in the ministers of the church, meaning thereby his branch of the Puritan Church, and that the province of the civil government was simply to carry out their decrees, even to the extreme of deadly persecution. At the instance of the ministers, as he insisted, it was the duty of the officers of the law to burn heretics and dissenters without mercy. This scheme, if carried out, meant nothing less than revolution, and such a challenge to her own authority threw Elizabeth into a rage as well it might. Aiming to crush the party that could engender such a sedition, and regarding it as a necessary measure of self protection, she, by enlarging the powers and the numbers of an existing commission, created the once celebrated Court of High Commissioners, a tribunal unknown to the common law and clothed with an authority akin to that of the Council of Ten in Venice and, in some respects, like that of the Spanish Inquisition. Its jurisdiction extended over the whole Kingdom. It had forty-four members in all including the highest ecclesiastical officials and a number of laymen, but it came, in practice, to be dominated by the Primate of all England, from Archbishop Whitgift in the time of Elizabeth to Archbishop Laud in the time of Charles the First. It enforced conformity by fine, imprisonment or banishment. The Puritan ministers, under its decrees, were compelled to follow the established order of worship and subscribe in every respect to the established creed or be turned out of their pulpits. Hundreds thus lost their livings and their parishioners were sent to jail by the score. Gradually this led to the formation of the so-called separatist churches, that is, congregations of those who ventured not to attend their parish church at all, or who stayed outside during part of the service and met, whenever they dared, to worship in their own way and under their own ministers. Severe as were the proceedings of the High Commissioners Court, it is clear that there was, to a greater or less extent, in many parts of the Kingdom violations of its injunctions, which escaped or evaded its notice and were never wholly suppressed. Such was the case in one locality in the North of England which has for us a lasting interest.

Just on the borders of Yorkshire stands the ancient village of Bawtry between the smaller villages of Austerfeldt and Scrooby. Scrooby was described by Leland, a writer in the time of Elizabeth, as a "mean townlet," referring, let us say, to its small size and humble exterior and not to the character of its inhabitants. It is situated in the midst of a flat country upon the present line of the Northern Railway and as an offset to the Elizabethan critic, it may be noted that it now has an Inn, which Baedeker certifies to as "well spoken of." The landscape about it is without striking features and is probably not very much changed in appearance from what it was in the Seventeenth Century, except there were then fewer hedges and less enclosed land. Yet the place is not without its natural attractions. It has shady woodlands and quiet streams. In ancient times Sherwood forest stretched to its borders and it was long a resort for hunters. A tributary of the Trent flows through its fields and adds its gentle murmur to the charm that everywhere belongs to rural England. Here still remains the small gray-stone parish church of ancient days, and, nearby, the spot may be identified where once stood the Manor House of the Archbishop of York. Part of the buildings had become dilapidated in the latter part of the reign of Elizabeth, but a substantial part remained and there, at that time, dwelt one Master William Brewster, graduate of Cambridge, scholar, diplomat, who had served as under secretary to Davison, the Queen's Minister, and stood by his superior, when the latter was undeservedly disgraced for delivering the death warrant of Mary Queen of Scots, which Elizabeth in an effort to hoodwink the world, affected to repudiate. Probably because of this event Brewster retired to Scrooby which was his native place, and there held the office of Post Master, which his father held before him, and which not only charged him with the distribution of letters over a considerable extent of country, but bound him to keep relays of horses for travelers by post along the great northern highway that passed through Scrooby and ran from London to York. But he did more. He was an earnest Puritan, and, as the hand of persecution grew heavier he offered his house which probably had then attached to it the chapel that belonged to the original establishment to those who, in their own way, wished to worship after the simple forms of their own faith. And those Sunday meetings in the old manor house were the cradle and origin of the Pilgrim Church that has formed one of the corner stones of our national existence. For the people thus gathered together ventured to form a church of their own, a congregational church separate from the church of England, and under that organization with some modifications they acted ever after, and the congregational churches in our land today are the direct successors of that primitive christian assembly.

The "poor people" of Scrooby, as they called themselves, lived with the danger of the pitiless Court of The High Commissioners constantly hanging over them when an event occurred which seemed to promise a change for the better. Late one evening in March in the year 1603, an almost breathless rider must have stopped to change horses at Master Brewster's post house for he covered 162 miles, the distance between London and Doncaster, which lay not many miles beyond Scrooby, in a single day. The rider bore great news for at two o'clock that morning the Queen had died at Richmond and he was on his way, in a mad race, to be the first to tell James the Sixth of Scotland that he was King of England.

Much was hoped for from the change. James had been brought up under the shadow of the Scottish Kirk and might be expected to sympathize with his new Puritan subjects. But he hated the Scottish Kirk and his narrow mind was so filled with the idea of his divine right as King that he could not brook a sect that placed conscience and the bible above a royal mandate. And so it followed that, if Elizabeth had lashed the non-conformists with whips, James lashed them with scorpions. "If ye dinna conform," said he, in his broad Scotch, at the Hampton conference with the Puritan ministers, "if ye dinna conform I'll harry ye oot o' the land," and he was as good as his word. Not only did he harry them by ruinous fines and cruel imprisonments, but he outraged their feelings in matters that did not reach their persons. For example, he ordered those ministers who still retained their parishes to encourage Sunday sports, such as the Maypole, dancing, archery, and the like, and prescribed an exhortation to that effect to be read in the churches, a proceeding which was then regarded with infinitely greater horror, than if Episcopal clergymen, at the present time, were compelled, under heavy penalties, to read at the end of the liturgy, notices of Sunday base ball games and impress upon their hearers the duty of attending them.

Then, at last, hopeless of peace in their own land, the little congregation at Scrooby, turned their back upon their homes, and, with their saintly pastor and leader, John Robinson, at their head, took up that Pilgrim's progress, the story of which the world knows by heart. The passage to Holland brutally interrupted by the very tyranny that was driving them away, whereby families were separated for weeks and women and children and Brewster himself, who stood by them, kept in jail before they were allowed to go; the first tarry at Amsterdam; the removal to Leyden and the eleven years sojourn there; the desperate poverty they had to encounter in the beginning, as exiles in a strange land, gradually overcome by wisely directed toil; their little community in the Dutch city winning its way by their integrity, their patience, their lofty and devoted faith until they were both respected and loved by the citizens and the learned University of Leyden itself chose John Robinson as its champion in theological debate; the long consideration and anxious thought that preceded the final determination, that to prevent absorption in an alien land and preserve their race and language and the purity of their religion, they would make a home for themselves and build up a commonwealth in the vast unsettled country across the sea, where they would still be English subjects and still preserve the mother tongue and that loyalty to the land of their birth that no persecution could eradicate; the pathetic parting and embarkation at Delft-Haven; the final sailing from Plymouth in the Mayflower; the long rough passage, the wintry landing on the wild shore of Massachusetts Bay; the heroic endurance and sublime courage that carried them through the sufferings and perils and hardships of the first early years and the final winning of the land for themselves and the generations that were to follow. What people upon earth can point to a more sacred beginning or claim a nobler ancestry?

The anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims on this side of the Ocean is properly kept in remembrance by the sons of New England, but, to me, the day of most significance in their history is that of their first departure upon their great enterprise—the embarkation at Delft-Haven. The town lies on the north bank of the broad Maas, a short distance up from the sea, some twenty miles south of Leyden and but two miles from Rotterdam ; indeed it is now within the corporate limits of that city. A characteristic Dutch road lined stiffly with trees leads down to the port which must present much the same appearance now that it did on that day in July—two hundred and eighty-five years ago, when the Pilgrims left the old world to find a home and found a Commonwealth in the new. Standing on the pier, the harbor waters lapping against its sides, one may picture to one's self the little high sterned ship ready to let go her moorings, and the scene when the Master gave warning that wind and tide allowed no longer waiting and that those who were to stay must go ashore. The voyagers had come down the day before, and were accompanied or followed by those who could not then sail besides many of their friends from Amsterdam. "That night," says Governor Bradford in his history, "was spent with little sleep" and he continues—"The next day, the wind being fair they went on board and their friends with them ; when truly doleful was the sight of that sad and mournful parting . . . what tears did gush from every eye, and pithy speeches pierced each other's heart ; that sundry of the Dutch strangers that stood on the wharf, as spectators, could not refrain from tears."

But amid streaming eyes and choking good-byes there was no faltering. Their faith was perfect, their courage unshaken. In very truth they felt that they were going forth for God and their country and when every head was uncovered and they knelt on the deck and tremulous but clear rose the voice of their loved pastor in the last prayer they were to hear him utter, it seemed as if his soul was touched with the inspiration of divine prophecy, for his last exhortation to them was that they should ever be ready for new truth and new light, for more than ever they had known might yet be revealed to them. What would have been his thoughts, what wonder and gratitude would have uplifted his soul, if some angel could have raised the curtain of the West and shown him the children's children of that gentle and heroic band foremost in a nation mightier than the world could then show—a nation vast, opulent, glorious and free—a home for the oppressed, a refuge for the persecuted ; and a voice from Heaven should have told him—"This shall be the fruit of your devotion—these, from generation to generation, shall look back to you and those now going forth bravely though in tears and hold you and them in everlasting reverence and love as the founders of their country and the fathers of their race."

The later Puritan migration that led to the founding of Boston was different in character from that which led to the original settlement at Plymouth. Twenty years had elapsed since the Pilgrims left their homes at Scrooby. The Puritans in England had grown to be a powerful party and its struggle with the absolutism of the Stuarts had grown fiercer ; the persecutions so the one side more bitter, the resentment on the other deeper. The opposing forces were gradually forming that finally met in the clash of civil war. But there was a time, some eight or ten years after the Plymouth settlement, when the cause of religious freedom in England and Europe offered little immediate hope, when the prospect on every side was so clouded that to many of the Puritan party it seemed better to seek the asylum already found by their brethren in the West than to endure the ills at home. This later immigration beginning in 1629, was led by those who had high birth, education, and, for those days, wealth. It may be a matter of interest to know that the price of passage from England at this time was £5, i.e., about $75 taking into consideration the relative value of money, and this sum, it may be supposed, did not include food, the passengers probably living about in the manner of those who now come over in the steerage. Saloons and state-rooms were unknown. Passengers brought their own bedding. Even as late as Dr. Johnson's day he contended, it will be remembered, that those on shipboard were not as well off as the inmates of a jail. The voyage, however, was not without its alleviations. Captain Roger Clap, who came over in 1630 records in his memoirs, "So we came, by the good hand of the Lord, through the deeps, comfortably, having preaching or expounding of the word of God every day for ten weeks together by our ministers." This later immigration far exceeded in numbers that of the Pilgrim pioneers and those who followed them to Plymouth. The original company in the Mayflower amounted to 101 all told, of whom but 43 were able bodied men, and in March, 1621, at the close of the first terrible winter they were able to muster but 55 survivors out of their entire number. Even as late as 1630, ten years after the first landing, Plymouth Colony contained only about 250 inhabitants. On the other hand the immigration that began about that year and settled Boston and its neighborhood brought over thousands. Between 1630 and 1640, the year when the Long Parliament met, fully 15,000 had settled in Massachusetts. After the meeting of the Long Parliament, however, and the beginning of the Civil War, the Puritan immigration almost totally ceased. From that time until as late as 1720, some eighty years, the population of New England received no appreciable accessions from abroad yet increased by birth more rapidly than since by immigration, which suggests that there could have been at that time no apprehension of race suicide.

It, therefore, so happened that the Puritan party was divided. Those who remained at home, in England, fought through the great rebellion, overthrew the monarchy and, in the end, found that they had only exchanged the absolutism of the Stuarts for the absolutism of Oliver Cromwell, their own leader. Those who had settled here were able, undisturbed, to develop a Puritan commonwealth in a new country, almost unaffected by outside influences. They were left to themselves to work out their own salvation, and they, in their turn, evolved a despotism as complete and more rigid than that of Cromwell backed by his army. Each branch of the party in its history merely illustrated the truth that Puritanism in its extreme original form in order to avoid anarchy led straight to despotic government. Given the belief that the bible speaks with an authority higher than that of any human government, and that its binding interpretation is that of the individual conscience—and the reduction of that belief to practice would simply put an end to all government. Such a result must be avoided if society is to be kept together. The early Puritans of Massachusetts accordingly, while, in theory, they upheld liberty of conscience, in practice, while not as cruel, were as intolerant of differences of belief as the Spanish Inquisition. They solved the problem by restricting the right to vote and hold office solely to the members, in full communion, of the Puritan congregational churches, so that the legislature and the churches were so closely united that the resolutions of the ecclesiastical synods held at Cambridge, had all the force of civil laws, and offenses against orthodoxy were taken cognizance of and punished by the civil magistrates. This made the government a theocracy and it threw a dark shadow over the people of Massachusetts for more than sixty years. What was held as truth by the majority of the ministers it was blindness and wickedness to reject. For the divine right of Kings, they substituted their own divine infallibility. The synod at Cambridge held in 1637, defined no less than eighty-two separate heresies, the entertaining of any one of which placed the offender in danger of the whipping post or the jail. They believed themselves to be acting under the especial guidance of Heaven and any accidents or ills which befell those who differed from or defied them were considered as manifest punishments inflicted by Providence for disregarding their authority. The same Captain Clap who had such an edifying voyage here narrates in another part of his memoirs that "there was one Capt. Stone . . . who carried himself very proudly and spake contemptuously of our magistrates." He was arrested and dismissed with a fine. He complained loudly of his treatment and being a man "of great relation and said to have favor in England," he "gave out threatening speeches." He was shortly after captured by the Pequot Indians, some of whom reported that they roasted him alive. "Thus," says the pious chronicler, "did God destroy him that so proudly threatened to ruin us, by complaining against us when he came to England." He further notes "there was one Ratcliff who spake boldly and wickedly against the government and governors here, using such words as some judged deserved death. He was for his wickedness whipped, and had both his ears cut off in Boston, A. D. 1631. I saw it done." Governor Winthrop viewed it as a notable judgment of God that an explosion of gun powder on an English ship lying off Charlestown killed the Captain and nine of his crew, because they were "profane scoffers." The profane scoffing consisted in a reply of the Captain who, when asked why he did not attend fast day services, answered "because they had as good services on shipboard as they had on shore." Besides the dark tragedies of this fanatical tyranny which lent

the strong arm of the law to the superstition of witchcraft, which banished the brilliant, cultivated and saintly Mrs. Anne Hutchinson, and left black against the sky on the lofty gallows on Boston Common the swaying body of Mary Dyer for professing the noble and beautiful faith of the Quakers, it led to an inquisitorial interference and control in the affairs of daily life that visited the smallest sins or most innocent indiscretions with stern punishment. In 1661 R. Smith for lying "concerning seeing a whale and other things" was fined 20 shillings. We may shudder to think what would have been his fate had he seen the sea serpent. Ordinary lying was punished by a fine of 10 shillings, which suggests the thought that a similar enactment applied to the yellow journalism of the present day would probably yield much more than the tax on mortgages. They were no respecters of sex. H. R. for abusing her husband was sentenced to be publicly whipped at the post; "at the earnest entreaty of herself and others, and promising amendment it was suspended; but if at any other time she be taken in the like fault to be executed." As nothing further is heard of her in the records, however, we may conclude that they lived happy ever after. The course of true love under this rigid system was made the reverse of smooth. A. H. for proposing marriage to E. F. and prosecuting the same "contrary to her parents' liking" was fined five pounds and to find security for good behavior and to desist from any means to obtain or retain her affections. I regret to find that this craven youth filed the security and "did solemnly and seriously engage before the Court that he would wholly desist and never apply himself for the future to Miss A. H. in reference unto marriage." She was well rid of him. Sarah Tuttle went to call on her friend Miss Murline and there, by accident or design, was Miss Murline's brother Jacob. Jacob being a bold young man got possession of Sarah's gloves and then gaily put his arm about her waist and said he wouldn't give them back unless she gave him a kiss, which, by way of securing payment, he proceeded to take on the spot. All this the seductive Sarah not only failed to resent but, while there was a conflict of testimony, the weight of evidence went to prove that the performance assumed a continuous character during which she actually kissed him. There was a solemn trial; many witnesses were examined; both the culprits were found guilty, and, after having been well lectured by the worshipful Governor himself, as presiding magistrate of the Court were fined 20 shillings each and I have no doubt that Jacob, like a gentleman, paid Sarah's fine as well as his own.

Smile as we may at this excessive and stern paternalism, it cannot be said that we have yet solved the problem of limiting government interference in such a manner as to give us any ground for greatly pluming ourselves over our Puritan ancestors. Over legislation, the continual intermeddling of public authority in matters that are of private concern, or that are not the proper subject of legislative regulation, is one of the most conspicuous faults of our system of popular government. Perhaps this is one respect in which we have inherited the Puritan failings as well as the Puritan virtues. But they had reasons on their side, which do not exist now. The first settlements had much the character of frontier camps where it was necessary to preserve camp discipline. In the early days of the Plymouth Colony the congregation used to march to church three abreast in military order, marshalled by Elder Brewster in his cloak, as a kind of robe of office, and Captain Standish carrying his famous sword. They had the Indians to deal with and for that and other reasons, a few disorderly characters within their own borders threatened the security of the whole colony, and a supervision was required that is not needed in larger and longer established communities. But without any such reason as that for summary and interfering legislation and without any reason at all, we have quite rivalled the blue laws in many of the acts which may be constantly found on our statute books. For example the Connecticut Puritans only forbade smoking on the street and in some other places and restricted its use by minors. The present Indiana statute makes it an offense to have a cigarette even in one's possession and a man was prosecuted for offering one to a monkey. In one of the states it is made a misdemeanor to offer a gratuity to a waiter, so he who tips his waiter at a hotel may, when he leaves, find the constable waiting for the tipper. Master Robert Keane a shop keeper of Boston was fined £100 by the Puritan magistrates for selling his goods at exorbitant prices, but in many of the states it is now made a crime to sell any commodity at prices reasonable or unreasonable if it happens that they have been fixed by any sort of an agreement with other dealers. A law of Colorado requires all private companies doing business in the state to pay their employees on the fifth and twentieth days of each month and to pay in nothing but cash or checks payable on demand, and by statute in Oregon it is made a criminal offense to represent any principles or policy as established by any political party unless such principles or policy have been adopted at certain primary elections held in accordance with the local Oregon laws; and, finally, in Oregon it is provided that in all counties having a population of fifty thousand and upward the adoption of all party policies and principles shall be done at primary elections provided for under the act; that any proposition which is a statement of such party policies or principles may be submitted to such primary, but shall not exceed fifty words in length and any one who publishes or represents any declaration of party principles or policy as adopted or established by any political party, when such principles or policy have been adopted or established in any other way than by vote at the primary shall be liable to a fine of not less than $500 or imprisonment. We may search the Puritan records in vain for any legislation which goes farther than this in the way of regulating the expression of opinion.

It would seem as if a community ruled and repressed as were the Puritans would either sink into superstitious stagnation or rise in revolt. Neither thing happened. There was reform without revolution. Puritan society gradually outgrew its narrowness. The intolerance of the governing class gave way

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions and the role of the accounting system in providing reliable financial information. It emphasizes the need for transparency and accountability in financial reporting, particularly in the context of public sector organizations. The text outlines the various components of the accounting system, including the classification of assets and liabilities, and the calculation of net worth. It also addresses the challenges of data collection and the importance of regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data.

The second part of the document focuses on the implementation of the accounting system and the role of the accounting officer. It discusses the need for a clear and concise set of accounting policies and procedures, and the importance of training and capacity building for the accounting staff. The text also highlights the need for a strong internal control system to prevent fraud and mismanagement of resources. It concludes by emphasizing the importance of the accounting system in providing a clear and accurate picture of the organization's financial health and performance.

before the growing liberality and better sense of the community until the theocracy was superseded. Even at the time of the persecution of the Quakers the majority of the people were against the magistrates and condemned their severity, and that persecution was the last that stained the annals of New England. The inherent strength and virtue of the Puritan character asserted itself. The bigotry that justified oppression and made it a duty to strip life of its innocent joys and refining graces could not stand forever against the keen intelligence that was sure to pierce through error at last, and the benign influence of the christianity, that taught them to love their neighbor, to deal justly and to hold charity the first of virtues. So that by natural development, and without the intermingling of another race or people, but as the outgrowth of their own society there arose, in the place of a theocracy narrow and intolerant, a well ordered and progressive state, where there was religion without persecution, liberty without license, and wealth, learning and art without enervating luxury.

And from that state, formed of the parent commonwealths that were included in New England, have proceeded, as I believe, the most potent and far reaching influences in the formation of our national character. That character is the result of elements and tendencies derived from many sources. The American race has in it the blood of Cavalier and Huguenot, Quaker and Catholic. Not England alone, but Germany, Holland, France, Scotland and Ireland have contributed to its development, but the traits derived from the Puritans seem, on the whole, to be the most controlling and the most lasting. This is due, as I believe, to the lofty and enduring character of the Puritan ideals and to their energetic and progressive spirit. Longfellow was true to his Puritan descent when he took "Excelsior" as the motto borne on the banner of the youth of his poem. The Puritan ever looked upward in things spiritual and forward in things material. He has been ever ready to learn new truth and bold to undertake new enterprises. He beyond all others is the embodiment of progress. He is by nature a pioneer and more than any other has impressed himself upon the country beyond his native boundaries. The beautiful land of the South holds the Southerner closely to its bosom, the Quaker likes to keep in touch with the communities of his own faith, the German is content with the place where he has found a home, but no power could confine the Puritan Yankee to New England. He has been the school-master abroad. He has overrun most of the country. Everywhere he has built bridges, dug mines, reared factories. He has headed great enterprises, inaugurated reforms, founded noble charities. His churches have risen in our cities and his school houses stood at our cross-roads. He led in the winning of the West. Colorado knows his footsteps. Northern Ohio, the Western Reserve, was known as new Connecticut, and he was in the firing line that made Kansas a free state.

Naturally, therefore, no single influence has been exerted so widely, has entered into the growth and given direction to the ideas of so many communities in our land as that which has come from the Puritans of New England and their descendants. The salient traits of their character may be constantly recognized, to a greater or less degree among our people and have done much in shaping our history.

New England was foremost in its devotion to the Union, and love for the Union was first aroused in the nation by the eloquence of Webster, and yet from New England came the first proclamation of the doctrine of secession.

The beginning of Puritanism was the assertion of the right of private judgment. It was a party of dissenters in politics as well as in religion, and it was Josiah Quincy of Massachusetts who, in opposing the admission of Louisiana as a state, said on the floor of Congress—and observe how he takes the Puritan stand of shaping his course by strictly adhering to principle :

“Mr. Speaker, there is a great rule of human conduct, which he who honestly observes, cannot err widely from the path of his sought duty. It is, to be very scrupulous concerning the principles you select as the test of your rights and obligations ; to be very faithful in noticing the result of their application ; and to be very fearless in tracing and exposing their immediate effects and distant consequences. Under the sanction of this rule of conduct, I am compelled to declare it as my deliberate opinion, that, if this bill passes, the bonds of this union are, virtually, dissolved ; that the states which compose it are free from their moral obligations, and that as it will be the right of all, so it will be the duty of some, to prepare, definitely, for a separation ; amicably, if they can ; violently, if they must.”

And it is worthy of note that he was called to order by Mr. Poindexter, the representative from the then territory of Mississippi, the future home of Jefferson Davis. In the war of 1812, the Island of Nantucket did, for a time, actually though not formally secede, and, in later years as the conflict over slavery deepened, the abolitionists, Puritans to the core, denounced the Union as a covenant with hell, and would have torn it asunder rather than been compelled to tolerate human bondage. Yet mark the result. In all these cases those who were driven to the extreme of advocating secession, were not impelled by ambition, or blind passion, but solely by their profound belief in what they thought was right. They were misled by the narrowness of their views. But, as they were not bound to those narrow beliefs by hope of gain or power, but by sincere conviction, show them that they were wrong and they were prompt to retract. The familiar lines of Pope's hymn breathe the spirit of Puritanism as it has been developed here and is the burden of its prayer :

“If I am right, Thy Grace impart
Still in the right to stay.
If I am wrong, oh, teach my heart
To find the better way.”

And, therefore, as in all other cases when the truth became clearly revealed, when secession with dark ruin in its train was actually upon us, their innate and underlying sound judgment showed the right path standing out as clear as the road in the summer sunshine, and straightway they turned into it. The very qualities that had made them obstinate in error made them indomitable for the truth. The first echo of the guns at Fort Sumter was met by the drum beat of the regiment that carried former Puritan secessionists in its ranks, marching through Baltimore. Wendell Phillips, the arch abolitionist who had denounced the Union and launched invectives against Webster, stood up in the Music Hall in Boston that had witnessed his former denunciations, and with the flag above him and amid a storm of cheers, poured forth a thrilling appeal to the multitude before him to stand fast for the integrity of the country. The monument to Robert Shaw on Boston Common, the flower strewn graves on Decoration Day in many a humble church yard, and the sword and faded sash over many a hearth stone, show how nobly that appeal was answered by the sons of New England.

If a Temple of Fame were built in honor of the nation's heroes and founders, the name of the Puritan would stand high among those inscribed upon its walls; but no chiseled column or lofty dome would seem an adequate or appropriate memorial for those whose simplicity was grander than display and to whom the call of duty was equally sacred whether, in the presence of some great crisis, it demanded all that a man hath to give even to life itself, or led along the homely paths of every day existence marked only by plain living and high thinking. It is easy, in imagination, to people our own dwelling place with their presence. The great Ocean with its ceaseless voice and ever varying beauty, the stretch of the sand hills, the refulgent summer around us, the fragrant shades of the woods, the stars appearing one by one in the measureless expanse of the tender evening sky, are the same today as when the settler from the mainland across the Sound first beheld them. They form nature's great temple that may best remind us of him who came, with the Geneva bible in his pocket and the axe on his shoulder to hew out his shore farm and extend the boundaries of the Puritan Commonwealth. Looking back at the work they did as founders of our Commonwealth and tracing with gratitude their strange eventful history, we cannot fail to remember what we owe them, and I close by recalling two items of that great debt.

First, we owe them the implanting among us of an appreciation of the value of universal education, an appreciation which has grown into a national belief and settled into a national policy. Wherever the Puritan cleared the forest, swiftly after the log church arose the log school house. And the log school house was followed by the College. Harvard and Yale are the offspring of the Puritan reverence for learning and themselves the parents of a beautiful sisterhood of colleges that diffuse the light of higher education throughout the land. "Educate all" was the Puritan idea and never was an idea bearing upon human progress planted in a more fruitful soil. The means of education within the reach of our whole people are such as no people upon earth ever before possessed or possess now. Travel through Europe and nowhere can you find the endless succession of schools of every kind from the stately halls of our universities, and academies of science and art, to the little frame school house with the flag before it, that you will find, as the legacy of Puritanism from Maine to California. The age is reproached as one of commercialism, yet no age in the world's history, no society bent upon the cultivation of intellect or animated by an Athenian love for art and beauty, no royal court where learning was fostered ever saw or dreamed of the more than royal munificence with which the winners of wealth in this country have endowed our educational institutions and promoted the cultivation of liberal studies and the diffusion of knowledge among their fellow countrymen. And it speaks the more impressively for the sincerity of the givers that from one of those passing clouds of prejudice and error, which, as I have said, are sure to be dissipated by returning sound judgment, their beneficence, at the present time, is even more likely to be met with indiscriminate sarcasm than with applause and with detraction and calumny rather than gratitude. The maxim, knowledge is power, was part of the Puritan creed. With them the power intended was the power to discern and apply spiritual truth, but the maxim has a wider application. In the competition of nations, knowledge, like Archimedes' lever, exerts a force that, given a fulcrum, can move the world. That has been the lesson of the great drama that was enacted upon the plain of Mukden and in the sea of Japan. For there we have seen, on the one side, the helpless and defeated hosts of a nation, mighty in its boundless natural resources, but one that jealous despotism afraid of the light, has kept in half darkness, letting in rays of knowledge only through chinks and crevices, and on the other side the triumphant hosts of the latest wonder among nations, that has sought the wide earth for knowledge and brought it to bear with a force as resistless as the hurricane that leaves annihilation in its track. More than ever before power in war and power in peace rests upon knowledge. The surest foundation of our wealth is that laid in the agricultural college, in the schools of civil engineering and in the study, to be pursued with Japanese patience, of science as applied to financial affairs. Our victories of diplomacy during the past momentous decade are due, beyond all others, to that scholar of Puritan descent, alas, that he is gone, whose trained mind and noble spirit has won for our Department of State the admiration and respect of the world, and the final guaranty for the essential scientific efficiency of our national defenses lies in the lectures of the class room at West Point and Annapolis.

But the Puritan idea of education has not developed merely in the direction of the knowledge of things material. It is a great mistake to suppose that the Puritan mind was inappreciative of beauty. In the early history of the sect, making its way through the fires of persecution and the hardships of the wilderness and the darkness of a narrow creed, like Christian going through the Valley of the Shadow of Death, they saw only grisly shapes around them and could think only of the perils of the way—but when the Valley was passed and the darkness slowly dissolved, like Christian too, they reached the House Beautiful. The age of repression was past. The spirituality of their belief betokened the innate refinement of their intellectual nature. Their native capacity for enjoyment and freedom of thought was given full play. It was under Oliver Cromwell and by his license that the opera was introduced into England, and his eye for color first clothed the British army in the red coats that, for so many years, were their picturesque distinction. A renaissance occurred in our own land of that literature, which more than a century before in the mother country had given the world the immortal allegory of Bunyan and the majestic music of Paradise Lost. It is to that literature that we owe the philosophy and poetry of Emerson, the beauty and humor of Lowell, the wit and pathos of Holmes, the imagination of Hawthorne clothing his sombre pictures with enchantment, the splendid panorama of history unrolled in the pages of Prescott and Motley and Parkman and Fisk, the Thanatopsis of Bryant, and Longfellow the sweet singer of the hearth and home. What other company of our writers have brought a contribution to American literature which can equal this in value and in permanence? Strike this out—strike out the writers who have Puritan blood in their veins and what is there left? I know that the disciples of later schools of poetry would, perhaps, not concede the preeminence of the Puritan poets. These have no place among those poets whose productions are like Gratiano's conversation; who "speaks with an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff; you shall seek all day ere you find them; and when you have them, they are not worth the search."

You may apply the quotation to much that has been and is admired in later day poetry, yet I venture the prediction that Longfellow will be read and remembered when the poets of twisted phrases and unintelligible stanzas have sunk into an oblivion deeper than the obscurity of their own writings.

Such then is the debt which the country owes to Puritanism in the noble domain of education and literature, and the other and final debt that I would mention, the greatest that civilization owes them arises from this, that from them has come down the New England conscience.

It is in that that the Puritan blood tells, in that that its inherited loyalty to duty marks the true nobility of the Puritan character. It came down to them from past generations. That it was that spoke, at the very birth of the faith that put conscience above authority, when Luther in the great hall of the Bishop's palace at Worms, facing the combined power of Pope and Emperor, rather than retract could only say: "Here I stand. I can do no otherwise. God help me, Amen." That it was that sent the little congregation at Scrooby into poverty and exile rather than profess a belief they did not entertain. And when Standish and his men, in their first exploration in search of a landing place, and far down on the Cape, found and appropriated a much needed store of Indian corn, that it was that never let them rest until, long after, and when they had settled at Plymouth, they searched for and found out the native owners and paid them an equivalent for their property ; that it was that when Judge Samuel Sewall, who presided at the witchcraft trials at Salem, became self convinced that he had done wrong though meaning to do justice, moved him to write out a confession of his error and repentance, and, while he stood up alone, caused the minister of the old South Church to which he belonged, to read it out to the whole congregation. And that it was that, as the age of superstition and repression passed away, gave us in its purity and sweetness the ideal home that grew up in the Puritan Commonwealth. The home where conscience and the heart, love and duty go hand in hand together. The birth place of the eager aspirations of youth, the retreat for the gentle repose of age. The nurse of all the virtues ; the place where we find the dearest reward in our triumphs, the greatest comfort in our sorrows ; the one spot where earth comes nearest heaven, and he who, with the remembrance of his Long Island birth-place rising before him, touched the harp strings that responded in the tones of "Home, Sweet Home," awoke a melody as immortal as the songs of the angels.

And on these foundations, the knowledge that is power, and the home born fidelity to duty—the double heritage that we have received from our forefathers, does the permanence of our existence as a free republic depend. They have sustained us in the past, and they alone can uphold us in the future. And let me read here the testimony contained in the earnest and sincere words spoken by the President of the United States. He said, on his trip to the Williams College Commencement this last summer :

"I come from New York, and I am myself of Dutch descent, but we have to acknowledge that even in New York it is the people of New England who have finally shaped the course of the Commonwealth's history ; and no American can fail to understand what it has meant to our country to have the people of old Puritan stock shape its history, because they have shaped it primarily in conformity with the principle of duty. That is why as a country we have been able to go on as we have."

And that is why, I add, we may trust and believe that as we have gone on in the past, so shall we go on in the future. Stumbling yet recovering our balance. Starting down the wrong road but turning back when we learn that we are out of the right way. A world to live and to work in such as our ancestors never saw or dreamed of. New dangers, more insidious temptations, vaster opportunities, but through it all we have not gone backward. Each succeeding age and generation, if we will balance the good and evil together has found us not only stronger but better. And that is because, as a people, we have preserved the principles that brought the Mayflower to our shores, namely that first to seek earnestly to know the right and then to follow it wherever it leads, is the whole duty of nations as it is the whole duty of man. And as long as in myriads of American homes those principles are taught by precept and example, though less by words than by deeds, less by exhortation than by the beautiful lives of the mothers of our race, never can we lose our faith that our beloved country will, more and more, become the home of public as well as private virtue, the promoter of peace among nations—

“The bearer of truth, and the herald of light
’Till the stock of the Puritans die.”

THE SOCIETY AND ITS WORK.

The objects of the Society shall be to foster the historical spirit in thought, study, and purpose; to encourage historical and antiquarian research; to disseminate historical knowledge, to collect and preserve such autograph letters and other manuscripts, maps, plans, charts, paintings, engravings, and other pictorial representations, books, pamphlets, newspapers, curiosities, and antiquities of every kind as may have been or shall be the products of Suffolk County, or of its several towns, some of which are the eldest English settlements and religious and civil organizations within the bounds of the State of New York; and also to discover, procure, and preserve whatever material of any kind may illustrate the history of the county and of its several towns. Constitution of the Society.

The payment of $100 to the Society constitutes a person a Memorial Member, such member's name, after his or her death, to be perpetually printed on the memorial page of the Society's Year Book; the payment of $10 constitutes a person a Life Member; and one may become an Annual Member upon the payment of $1. The payment of $50 constitutes a Family Life Membership.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE SOCIETY.

The Year Book presents to you the names of the various classes of members and shows you what we are collecting. Can you not add to the membership and thus promote the interests of the Society and increase its usefulness? A large number of In Memoriam and Life Members would enable us to remove our indebtedness and open up our room with the accumulated treasures of past years to the public. While many of the articles contributed may seem unimportant, they are of value to us in collections. Duplicates are exchanged with other societies. Among things of little value to the individual we find many very useful to us in completing sets and the like. We ask your constant remembrance and hearty co-operation.

NOTES OF INTEREST.

At a special meeting of the Society held May 1, 1905, in Riverhead, the following resolutions were adopted :

The address was delivered by Edmund Wetmore, Esq., of New York, ex-President of the New York State Bar Association and President of the Sons of the Revolution of New York City, who chose for his subject "The Puritans." An excellent musical programme added interest to the meeting.

NEXT ANNUAL MEETING.

The next annual meeting of the Society will be held at the rooms in Riverhead Tuesday, February 20, 1906.

MINUTE ON RETIREMENT OF PRESIDENT NAT. W. FOSTER.

At the annual meeting held February 21, 1905, the following "Minute on the retirement of Nat. W. Foster from the presidency of the Suffolk County Historical Society," was prepared and presented by Rev. W. I. Chalmers and unanimously adopted by the Society :

"Whereas, Nat. W. Foster has felt constrained to retire from the presidency of the Suffolk County Historical Society, the Society deems it eminently proper that there should be placed on record its appreciation of his long and devoted services for its interests and welfare.

"Associated with it from the beginning and filling the office of president for the past eleven years, he has brought to it the zeal and enthusiasm which have characterized him in so many institutions of the town and county of his birth ; he has generously given time, labor, and all at his command for the promotion of its prosperity ; he has enriched its collections with the valuable additions which he has secured through persevering energy and encouragement ; he has left upon it for good the impress of his marked individuality.

"While in his retirement the Society loses a most capable and efficient officer the example of his constant labors and wise administration for its success will remain as a model for the emulation of those who follow him and ever endear his name in the history and work of the institution."

MINUTE ON DEATH OF THE REV. S. E. HERRICK, D. D.

At the annual meeting held February 21, 1905, the following "Minute on the death of the Rev. Samuel E. Herrick, D. D., honorary member," was adopted :

"The Suffolk County Historical Society having adopted the practice of selecting and enrolling as honorary members a number of men and women who, while not residents of Suffolk County, were prominent by reason of liberal culture, and interest in historical lore, and who at the same time were more or less closely identified with the welfare of the county, placed at an early date upon its pages the name of the Rev. Samuel E. Herrick, D. D.

"Born in Suffolk County, and spending his summers among us, he maintained to the last his inherited interest in the honorable traditions of the place of his birth.

"At his suggestion, as a careful student of history and collector of the valuable, the rare, and the interesting, the Society first came into being, and through the years of its existence and usefulness has been indebted to him for many wise counsels.

"From the unique place which he thus occupies in our institution, and from the eminence which he attained in his profession as religious teacher and as a scholar and orator, and from the honor rendered our Society by his membership, the Suffolk County Historical Society makes this minute upon the departure of one for whom in the future the inevitable star must signify that, by tender memory and silent influence, rather than by living presence, he must have part in our growth and progress."

FOR THE FUTURE.

The following suggestions in regard to the drafting of wills are made for the information of those who desire to leave bequests to the Society, and thus perpetuate the work when their own personal efforts are ended:

THE SOCIETY AND ITS WORK.

The objects of the Society shall be to foster the historical spirit in thought, study, and purpose; to encourage historical and antiquarian research; to disseminate historical knowledge, to collect and preserve such autograph letters and other manuscripts, maps, plans, charts, paintings, engravings, and other pictorial representations, books, pamphlets, newspapers, curiosities, and antiquities of every kind as may have been or shall be the products of Suffolk County, or of its several towns, some of which are the oldest English settlements and religious and civil organizations within the bounds of the State of New York; and also to discover, procure, and preserve whatever material of any kind may illustrate the history of the county and of its several towns. Constitution of the Society.

The payment of $100 to the Society constitutes a person a Memorial Member, such member's name, after his or her death, to be perpetually printed on the memorial page of the Society's Year Book; the payment of $10 constitutes a person a Life Member; and one may become an Annual Member upon the payment of $1.

The payment of $50 constitutes a Family Life Membership.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE SOCIETY.

This Year Book records the new members enrolled and the contributions received by the Society in the year 1906. It is the twelfth in the series, and, taken with those which precede it, shows many of the rare treasures and valuable acquisitions in our rooms. Others were received before the publication of the Year Book began. For twenty years we have been collecting, and will continue to do so.

To many familiar with our work it seems that the time has come when this valuable collection should be properly arranged, catalogued, and made useful to the public. Something has been done in the matter of arrangement, and visitors can now easily find the books, pamphlets and articles they seek. The work, however, should be done scientifically or systematically. The cataloguing should be complete. The whole collection should be made of practical use to all who seek information concerning Suffolk County history, genealogy, literature, etc. The rooms should be open to the public certain days or hours of the week, if not all the time.

The Society cannot do its full work without means. It still has a debt upon its building. It depends for funds upon moneys secured for the different classes of membership, and on the gifts of friends. It has no annual dues and makes no assessments. We need, therefore, a larger interest upon the part of Suffolk County people which will bring many of them into membership.

The history of the county is rich in material and precious in memory. The people ought to preserve it and assist the Society in gathering together everything that records its achievements and illustrates its progress. Many friends have contributed over and above their membership fee. We need others to imitate their example. We need and ask for an enlarged roll of Life Members. Correspondence with the officers of the Society is cordially invited.

THEORY OF THE EARTH

The theory of the earth is a branch of geology which deals with the origin and development of the earth and its various parts. It is a science which seeks to explain the processes which have shaped the earth and its features, and to determine the laws which govern these processes.

MEETINGS OF THE SOCIETY, 1906.

The Annual Meeting was held in the Building of the Suffolk County Historical Society at Riverhead Tuesday, February 20, 1906, at 1.30 P. M. In the absence of President Augustus Floyd the Rev. Wm. I. Chalmers, Second Vice President, presided. The Treasurer's report showed that during the year three hundred dollars had been paid on the mortgage, reducing it to five hundred dollars. The report also showed an indebtedness of one hundred and ninety dollars in bills against the Society.

At the election of officers the persons serving the last year were unanimously re-elected. Their names appear in the usual place in this book. Letters were read from First Vice President Rev. Ephur Whitaker, D. D., Corresponding Secretary Selah B. Strong, Samuel L. Parrish and others, who were unable to be present. Many items of interest were discussed, particularly the need of raising more money for the work of the Society, and the necessity of placing some competent person in charge of the Building who can open it at stated times to the public, and who can arrange and catalogue the valuable collection of the Society.

The Summer Meeting was held in the M. E. Church in Huntington July 6, 1906, at 8 P. M., upon invitation from the local Colonial Society. President Augustus Floyd presided.

Brief addresses were delivered by Mrs. Sammis of the Colonial Society, President Floyd of the Suffolk County Historical Society, upon its work, and Rev. S. D. Lewis of the Huntington M. E. Church.

In the absence of the Hon. Townsend Scudder, who was unable to attend by reason of illness, the address of the evening was delivered by the Rev. Wm. I. Chalmers of Riverhead, Second Vice President of the Society, who spoke upon "The Work of the County Society in promoting the Study of Local History, and the Importance of Every Step in the Advance of Civilization."

An excellent musical program was rendered, which added much to the interest and pleasure of the meeting.

NEXT ANNUAL MEETING.

The next Annual Meeting of the Society will be held at the Rooms in Riverhead Tuesday, February 19, 1907.

FOR THE FUTURE.

The following suggestions in regard to the drafting of wills are made for the information of those who desire to leave bequests to the Society, and thus perpetuate the work when their own personal efforts are ended:

THE SOCIETY AND ITS WORK.

The objects of the Society shall be to foster the historical spirit in thought, study, and purpose; to encourage historical and antiquarian research; to disseminate historical knowledge, to collect and preserve such autograph letters and other manuscripts, maps, plans, charts, paintings, engravings, and other pictorial representations, books, pamphlets, newspapers, curiosities, and antiquities of every kind as may have been or shall be the products of Suffolk County, or of its several towns, some of which are the oldest English settlements and religious and civil organizations within the bounds of the State of New York; and also to discover, procure, and preserve whatever material of any kind may illustrate the history of the county and of its several towns. Constitution of the Society.

The payment of $100 to the Society constitutes a person a Memorial Member, such member's name, after his or her death, to be perpetually printed on the memorial page of the Society's Year Book; the payment of $10 constitutes a person a Life Member; and one may become an Annual Member upon the payment of $1.

The payment of $50 constitutes a Family Life Membership.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE SOCIETY

A careful reading of the Year Book for 1907 will show an increase in the number of names in the In Memoriam Memberships, and also in the Life Memberships. Through the kindness of friends aiding in these memberships the Society has been able to pay off its mortgage and enter a new year free from debt. Thanks also are due to a number whose names do not appear in the list of In Memoriam Members, but who have paid the proper fee and who are registered for this honor. It may be others while living will follow their example and secure their names a place in this list. The response to the appeal of the Society for subscriptions and gifts for the current expenses was very gratifying. The names of the friends who have come to the help of the Society at this time appear in the List of Contributors for 1907. Many who failed to reply to the circular letter may now be reminded of it, and may join this list of helpers by sending their names and amounts of their subscriptions to the Recording Secretary. The gifts received have enabled the Society to paint and repair its building and to keep open the rooms during Fair week and meet some incidental expenses. More people have visited the rooms than ever before. Admiration for the valuable collection is continually expressed. What we need is more friends of Suffolk County to help by annual subscriptions, so that the building can be kept open at regular periods and the collection catalogued.

ANNUAL MEETING, 1907

The Annual Meeting of the Society was held at Riverhead Tuesday, February 19, 1907, President Augustus Floyd presiding. Officers were elected whose names appear in the usual place in this volume. Treasurer's Report showed receipts of $203.76, and disbursements of $60.95; also bills of $158.55, and a balance of $500 on mortgage against the Society.

The Recording Secretary was directed to prepare and send an appeal to the members and friends of the Society for contributions or annual subscriptions for five years to meet the current expenses of the Society.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE DIRECTORS

A meeting of the Directors of the Society was held at Riverhead April 29, 1907, President Augustus Floyd presiding.

The Recording Secretary reported the amounts received or pledged in response to the appeal sent out by direction of the Society at the annual meeting, Feb. 19, 1907.

The Treasurer reported that he had paid the balance due on mortgage, with interest in full to date.

Rev. Wm. I. Chalmers, Curator, and Geo. F. Stackpole, Second Vice President, were appointed a committee to make needed repairs on the building.

SUMMER MEETING

The Summer Meeting of the Society was held at Southold on the evening of June 21, 1907, President Augustus Floyd presiding. Complete arrangements had been made by the First Vice President, Rev. Dr. Ephraim Whitaker, who was kindly assisted by the choir of the Mattituck Presbyterian Church. The address of the evening was delivered by the Rev. Charles E. Craven of Mattituck, whose subject was "The Influence of the Productions and Trade of Gardiner's and Peconic Bays Upon the Life and Character of the Neighboring People."

NEXT ANNUAL MEETING

The next Annual Meeting of the Society will be held at the Rooms in Riverhead, Tuesday, Feb. 18, 1908.

FOR THE FUTURE.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the Suffolk County Historical Society formed in the State of New York Sept. 28, 1886, incorporated Feb. 18, 1892, and reorganized March 19, 1892, the sum of.....to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Society.

IN MEMORIAM

NAT. W. FOSTER

Second President of the Suffolk County Historical Society.

BornSeptember, 24, 1835

DiedAugust 16, 1910

President1894-1904

Nat. W. Foster was one of the organizers of this Society and thereby identified with it from the beginning. Filling the office of 2nd Vice-President at the time of the death of Hon. James H. Tuthill, First President of the Society, he was chosen President upon nomination of the Rev. Ephraim Whitaker, D. D., 1st Vice-President. The choice was a worthy and fortunate accession to the body of officers who have cared for the Society's welfare.

Born in Suffolk County, tracing ancestry to early settlers, familiar with the County's history, loving its name and everything pertaining to its good and honor, he labored to found this Society, which seeks as its chief object to preserve everything of historic value which illustrates the story of the County's beginning, progress and achievements and to transmit them to posterity for their study and emulation.

Called to the presidency, he gave to that office the benefits of those qualities which characterized him and made him so useful in organizing and carrying forward through experimental days so many institutions in Town and County and brought him honor and reward in their development and success.

Into the presidency of this Society he brought that enthusiasm that energy and untiring industry which all familiar with our history recognized and gratefully acknowledged.

To him this society is greatly indebted for the interest which he aroused and for the wide and valuable collections he secured.

When removed from the County and the scene of our work, he continued to be an influence in our society in the encouragement he inspired by his work in office and in the example set for those who have followed him in collecting and arranging the Society's treasures.

When the historian of the future shall make up the record of this Society, and the County of Suffolk, and the Town and Village of Riverhead, the name of Nat. W. Foster will have a place and a tribute which the nearness of the present time may not permit, but which the future will demand in its narration of the facts and its estimate of his services.

ARTICLE BY J. H. HARRIS, M.D.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE PHYSICIAN'S RESPONSIBILITY IN THE PREVENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS

Read at the Annual Meeting of the American Medical Association, Chicago, Ill., June 1917.

It is a well-known fact that tuberculosis is the most common cause of death in this country. It is also a disease which is preventable. The physician has a special responsibility in the prevention of tuberculosis, and it is the duty of the medical profession to take the most effective measures to prevent its spread.

The first step in the prevention of tuberculosis is the early diagnosis of the disease. The physician should be on the alert for the signs and symptoms of tuberculosis, and should make a thorough examination of every patient who complains of cough, fever, or weight loss.

When a patient is found to have tuberculosis, the physician should advise him to rest, to eat a nutritious diet, and to take the proper medicine. He should also advise him to avoid crowded places and to keep his room well ventilated.

The physician should also advise the patient to avoid contact with other persons who have tuberculosis. He should also advise him to avoid contact with animals which may be infected with the disease.

The physician should also advise the patient to avoid contact with persons who have tuberculosis. He should also advise him to avoid contact with animals which may be infected with the disease.

The physician should also advise the patient to avoid contact with persons who have tuberculosis. He should also advise him to avoid contact with animals which may be infected with the disease.

Therefore Be It Resolved, That a Memorial Page be set apart in the next number of the Year Book of this Society, on which shall be inscribed some fitting tribute to his place in the history of our organization, and his untiring labors for its welfare.

THE SOCIETY AND ITS WORK

The objects of the Society shall be to foster the historical spirit in thought, study, and purpose; to encourage historical and antiquarian research; to disseminate historical knowledge, to collect and preserve such autograph letters and other manuscripts, maps, plans, charts, paintings, engravings, and other pictorial representations, books, pamphlets, newspapers, curiosities, and antiquities of every kind as may have been or shall be the products of Suffolk County, or of its several towns, some of which are the oldest English settlements and religious and civil organizations within the bounds of the State of New York; and also to discover, procure, and preserve whatever material of any kind may illustrate the history of the county and of its several towns. (Constitution of the Society).

The payment of $100 to the Society constitutes a person a Memorial Member, such member's name, after his or her death, to be perpetually printed on the memorial page of the Society's Year Book; the payment of $10 constitutes a person a Life Member; and one may become an Annual Member upon the payment of $1.

The payment of $50 constitutes a Family Life Membership.

In the absence of President Augustus Floyd, the Second Vice-President, George F. Stackpole, presided. There were about twenty persons present. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Charles E. Craven, D. D. The minutes of the annual meeting held on Feb. 21, 1911, and of the Summer meeting held in Sag Harbor on June 26, 1911, were read and so approved. The Treasurer, Timothy M. Griffing, read his report for 1911, which was adopted and ordered spread in full upon the minutes. This showed receipts for the year, $261.00; disbursements, $252.48; balance in treasury, $8.52.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, the Rev. Willard P. Harmon; First Vice-President, the Rev. Ephraim Whitaker, D. D.; Second Vice-President, George F. Stackpole; Corresponding Secretary, Elihu S. Miller; Recording Secretary, Miss R. H. Tuthill; Treasurer, Timothy M. Griffing; Curator, the Rev. William I. Chalmers. The Curator gave a report of the valuable work done for the Society, which was adopted, and it was ordered that one hundred dollars be given to him in recognition of his services during the year. One of our Honorary Members, Mr. Frederic G. Mather, President of the Stamford, Conn., Historical Society, gave a report of the work being done by that society, and he was unanimously thanked for his address. Acting upon one of his suggestions, it was ordered that this Society hold a meeting and loan exhibition in Riverhead next Summer, and as a committee having that matter in charge the President appointed Elihu S. Miller, Mrs. T. M. Griffing, Mrs. J. H. Tuthill, the Rev. Dr. C. E. Craven, the Hon. Henry A. Reeves, the Hon. Augustus Floyd, Selah B. Strong, O. B. Ackerly, John Bagshaw, and ex officio the Curator, William I. Chalmers. As a committee to secure an increased income and new members the following were appointed: The Rev. W. P. Harmon, Miss R. H. Tuthill, T. M. Griffing, and George F. Stackpole. After general discussion of various phases of the work of the Society, the meeting adjourned.

RUTH H. TUTHILL,
Recording Secretary.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Suffolk County Historical Society was held in the chapel of the First Congregational Church, Riverhead, on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 18, 1913, the president, the Rev. Willard P. Harmon, presiding, and about fifty members being present. The minutes of the 1912 annual meeting were read and so approved. The treasurer's report for the year, showing a net balance on hand of $183.40 was read by the treasurer, the Hon. T. M. Griffing, and having been examined and found correct by the auditing committee, consisting of Messrs. G. F. Stackpole, O. B. Ackerly and Elihu Miller, was approved and ordered spread in full upon the minutes. The curator, the Rev. W. I. Chalmers, presented his annual report, especially calling attention to the new glass cases for exhibits recently placed in the Society's building. It was ordered that the sum of one hundred dollars be donated to the curator for his services during the past year. The report on the Loan Exhibition held by the society last July was given by Elihu S. Miller, chairman of the exhibition committee; he stated that over four hundred exhibits were entered, and the exhibition was in many ways helpful to the society. The annual election of officers resulted in the choice of the officers given in the usual place in this year book. A letter was read requesting the society to loan some of its Indian relics for the forthcoming exhibition in Huntington. The curator was empowered to loan such relics as he deemed proper. The matter of lighting the society building was referred to the directors for action. It was ordered that the number of year books be increased to six hundred, and that a new seal for the society be secured. Charles H. Howell, District Superintendent of Schools for the First District of Suffolk County, then delivered a very interesting address on "Some Thoughts About Suffolk County," for which he was unanimously thanked; prayer was offered by the Rev. W. I. Chalmers, and the meeting adourned.

RUTH H. TUTHILL,
Recording Secretary.

THEORY OF THE EARTH

CHAPTER I

The Earth is a sphere, and its surface is divided into four parts, called continents, by the great oceans. The continents are Asia, Europe, Africa, and America. The oceans are the Pacific, Atlantic, Indian, and Arctic. The Earth is also divided into smaller parts, called islands and archipelagos. The Earth is covered with water, and the water is divided into oceans, seas, and lakes. The Earth is also covered with land, and the land is divided into continents, islands, and archipelagos. 1. The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that a knowledge of the past is essential for a full understanding of the present and for the development of a sound perspective on the future. The author points out that the study of history is not merely a collection of facts and dates, but a process of critical thinking and analysis. It is through the study of history that we can learn from the mistakes of the past and avoid them in the future.

2. The second part of the paper discusses the role of the individual in the history of the United States. It is argued that the actions of individuals have shaped the course of the nation's history. The author points out that the study of history is not merely a study of the past, but a study of the present. It is through the study of history that we can learn about the values and beliefs of the people who have shaped the nation. The author also points out that the study of history is not merely a study of the past, but a study of the future. It is through the study of history that we can learn about the challenges that the nation will face in the future and how to meet them.

The first of these is the fact that the United States is a young country. It has only been about 150 years since it was founded. This means that it has not had time to develop a long and established tradition of government. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life.

The second fact is that the United States is a large country. It covers a vast area of land, and it has a large population. This means that it is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life.

The third fact is that the United States is a country of many different peoples. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life.

The fourth fact is that the United States is a country of many different peoples. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life.

The fifth fact is that the United States is a country of many different peoples. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life.

The sixth fact is that the United States is a country of many different peoples. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life. It is a country that is still in the process of finding its own way of life.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Suffolk County Historical Society was held in the chapel of the First Congregational Church of Riverhead on the third Tuesday of February, 1914, and was called to order at one o'clock P. M. by the President, Rev. W. P. Harmon. Owing to the severe storm of the previous day there was a small attendance. The minutes of the 1913 annual meeting were read and approved. In the absence of the treasurer, Hon. T. M. Griffing, the treasurer's report for the year, showing a cash balance on hand of $11.97, with a deposit of $900 in the Savings Bank, was read by the recording secretary. Curator Chalmers gave an interesting report of his work done for the society during the year. It was adopted and its recommendations approved, and on motion it was suggested that the local papers be requested to publish it. It was ordered that the sum of one hundred dollars be donated to the curator for services rendered during the year. President Harmon reported for the directors that action had been taken in regard to lighting the society's building with electricity. The annual election of officers resulted in the re-election of the same officers for the year 1914. A committee consisting of Rev. W. P. Harmon, T. M. Griffing, W. I. Chalmers, O. B. Ackerly, E. S. Miller, Samuel L. Parrish, James W. Eaton, Henry A. Reeves and R. H. Tuthill was appointed to consider the question of enlarging or rebuilding the Historical Society's building. A notice was given in writing that at the next regular meeting of the society "a motion will be made to change Art. 3 of the Constitution relative to the time of holding the annual meeting," and a committee consisting of President W. P. Harmon, E. S. Miller, T. M. Griffing, W. I. Chalmers, R. H. Tuthill and O. B. Ackerly was appointed to consider this subject and make suggestions at the next annual meeting. General discussion followed and prayer was offered by Rev. W. I. Chalmers, after which the meeting adjourned.

RUTH H. TUTHILL,
Recording Secretary.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth, struggle, and achievement. From the first European settlers to the present day, the nation has evolved through a series of challenges and triumphs. The early years were marked by the search for a stable government and the expansion of territory. The American Revolution was a pivotal moment, leading to the birth of a new nation. The 19th century was a period of rapid growth and change, with the Civil War being a defining event. The 20th century saw the rise of the United States as a global superpower, with significant technological and social advancements. The present day is a time of continued growth and challenge, with the nation facing new and complex issues. The history of the United States is a testament to the resilience and spirit of its people.

Rev. Ephes Whitaker, D. D.

First Vice President of the Suffolk County Historical Society

Born March 27, 1820

Died September 1, 1916.

In the death of the Reverend Doctor Ephes Whitaker the Suffolk County Historical Society has suffered the loss of one of its best known and most honored members. Called to the office of First Vice President of the Society upon its organization in 1886, he filled that office till his death.

While his advanced age did not allow him to enter into the work of the society in recent years, his name was a source of strength and remembrance of the great eminence and ability for which he was originally chosen when the society began its important work of collecting and preserving the materials of our County History.

As a scholar, a pastor and honored officer in Presbytery and Synod, as a valuable citizen, as an historian and writer contributing so much to our historical material, as a cultured student and laborer in all departments for the welfare of the community, his record and value have been given in the many able summaries of his career that have appeared in the local press.

It remains for some loving friend and able hand to write in full form his record. Meanwhile we simply chronicle our loss and devote this page to his memory.
